

Interior of the Building

- Lobby areas

Left: A security station staffed during business hours stands just inside the main entrance of the building. All building employees and visitors must pass through security before entering the Court House.

Right: The main lobby of the Court House is a long rectangular shape composed of a variety of marble. The vaulted ceilings and continuous arcade along the side walls display the historical integrity of the facility.

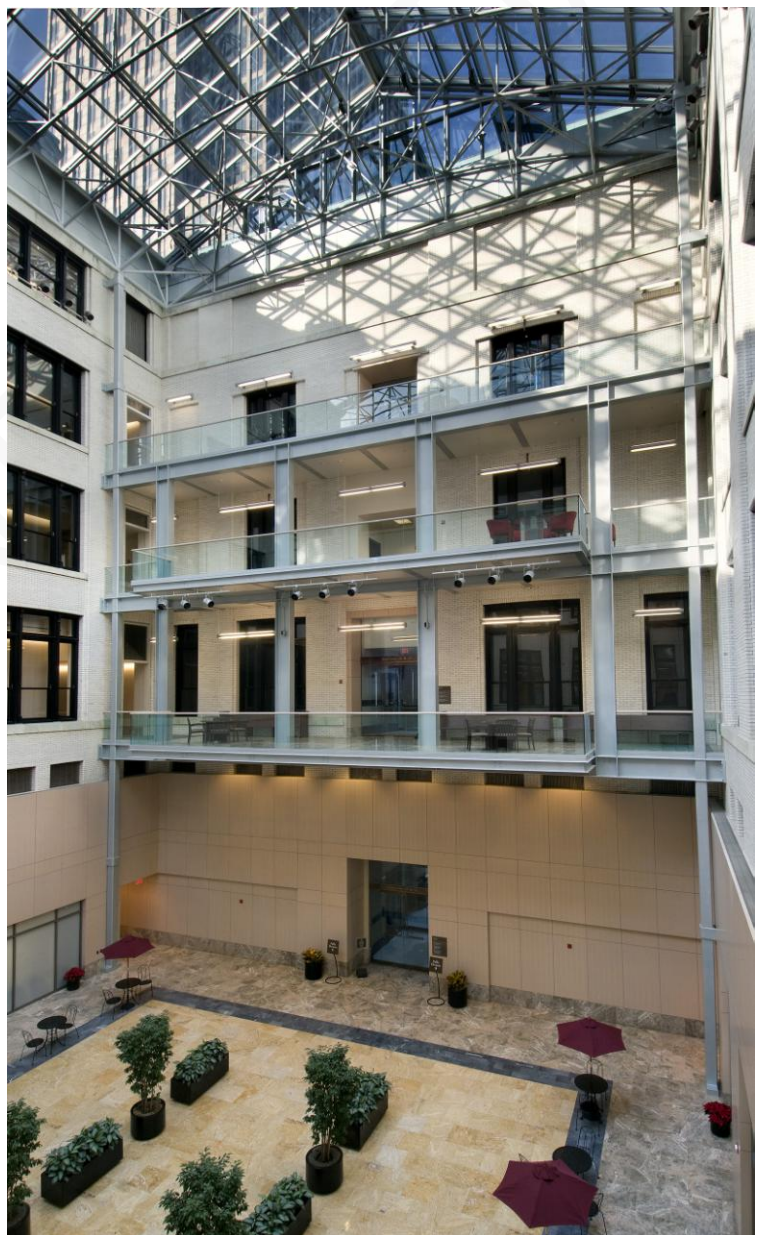

- Common areas

Right: The original building architecture consisted of an exterior court yard at the center the then post office. After an extensive renovation completed in 2005, the building reopened with the atrium enclosed by a full skylight system. The atrium serves as a gathering place for building tenants and public visitors that creates an outdoor feel within the heart of the Court House.

- Typical Office Spaces

Right: Typical third floor office suite.

- Other

Both preserved historical (left) and modernized (below) court room settings are within the Court House. There are two historical courtrooms located on the third floor which are occupied by the U.S. District Court. The four modernized courtrooms on the first and second floors are occupied by the U.S. Bankruptcy Court.

Exterior of the Building

- Front Entrance

The main entrance for employees and visitors is located in the heart of downtown Cleveland facing public square. The grand staircase leads to three recessed round-arched openings separated by historical light fixtures that serve as the main building entrance. The exterior façade is granite.
